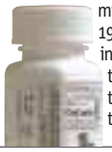
TRUMP: N. KOREA WILL BE MET WITH FIRE AND FURY

President Donald Trump on Tuesday warned North Korea it would be met with "fire and fury" if it threatens the United States. Earlier Pyongyang said it was ready to give Washington a "severe lesson" with its strategic nuclear force in response to any U.S. military action. Washington has warned it is ready to use force if need be to stop North Korea's ballistic missile and nuclear programs but that it prefers global diplomatic action, including sanctions. The consequences of any U.S. strike would potentially be catastrophic for South Koreans, Japanese and U.S. military personnel within range of North Korean retaliatory strikes. For more, see page 4.

NH SUES PURDUE PHARMA OVER OPIOID MARKETING



New Hampshire sued Oxycontin maker Purdue Pharma LP on Tuesday, becoming the latest state or local government to accuse the drugmaker of engaging in deceptive marketing practices that have helped fuel a national opioid addiction epidemic. The lawsuit filed in Merrimack County Superior Court claimed that Purdue Pharma significantly downplayed the risk of addiction posed by Oxycontin and engaged in marketing practices that "opened the floodgates" to opioid use and abuse. The complaint said the Stamford, Connecticut-based company spent hundreds of millions of dollars since the 1990s on misleading marketing that has also overstated the benefits of opioids for treating chronic, rather than short-term, pain.

5 THINGS YOU NEED TO KNOW

FDA CAMPAIGN AGAINST YOUTH E-CIGARETTE USE

Hot on the heels of its proposal to lower nicotine levels in cigarettes, the U.S. Food and Drug Administration announced plans on Tuesday for an education campaign to discourage use of electronic cigarettes among youth. The plan follows the agency's proposal last month to both lower nicotine in combustible cigarettes and extend by four years the date by which e-cigarette manufacturers will be required to apply for authorization to sell their products. Its new policy "aims to strike a careful balance between the regulation of all tobacco products, and the opportunity to encourage development of innovative tobacco products that may be less dangerous than combustible cigarettes," FDA Commissioner Scott Gottlieb said in a statement.

DISNEY TO PULL NEW MOVIES FROM NETFLIX

Walt Disney Co. will stop providing new movies to Netflix Inc. starting in 2019 and launch its own streaming service, the company said, as it tries to capture digital audiences who are ditching traditional television. The new Disney-branded streaming service will follow a similar ESPN service that will be available starting in 2018, the company said. Shares of Netflix fell 3.7 percent in after-hours trade, and Disney stock fell 3.1 percent. The streaming services will give Disney "much greater control over our own destiny in a rapidly changing market," Chief Executive Bob Iger told analysts in a conference call, describing the moves as an "entirely new growth strategy" for the company.

Trump warns North Korea after mini nukes detected

In response to Trump's warning, North Korea threatened a key U.S. territory with a missile strike.

JASON NUCKOLLS
@MetroPhilly
jason.nuckolls@metro.us

A confidential analysis from Defense Intelligence Agency officials that was completed last month concluded that North Korea has produced miniaturized nuclear warheads, the Washington Post first reported on Tuesday. Such warheads, which can fit inside the North's missiles, show that the country has accomplished a key component toward its goal of becoming a full nuclear power.

In response, President Donald Trump issued a dire warning to North Korea, saying the country will "face fire and fury like the world has never seen," CNN reported, adding that the capability of North Korea's miniaturized warheads was not yet believed to have been tested.

In July, North Korea did test two intercontinental ballistic missiles, with U.S. analysts believing the first could have hit Hawaii and Alaska, while the second could have possibly struck the Midwest, according to the New York Daily News.

These latest developments do not necessarily mean that North Korea would be able to accurately use a nuclear-tipped missile in a strike, NBC News reported. Before such a capability, the country would first have to develop a weapon that could accurately withstand atmospheric re-entry.

Earlier on Tuesday, North Korea threatened "physical action" in response to new U.N. sanctions targeting the country, according to a New York Times article. That statement is believed to indicate that Pyongyang could conduct further nuclear or missile tests in response to the latest sanctions.

> "The great leaders that I have seen – they don't threaten unless they are ready to act, and I'm not sure that President Trump is ready to act."
> John McCain

Later, North Korea released another statement claiming it is "carefully examining" a plan to use its missiles to strike Guam, a key U.S. territory in the Pacific, according to CNBC. A separate statement from the North claimed the nation could carry out a pre-emptive operation in response to signs of U.S. provocation.

U.S. Sen. John McCain was skeptical of the president's warning to North Korea, according to the BBC, which quoted the senator as saying, "The great leaders that I have seen — they don't threaten unless they are ready to act, and I'm not sure that President Trump is ready to act."

ANALYSIS

What does North Korea's latest nuclear capability mean for the U.S.?
Elisabeth Braw is a senior fellow at the Atlantic Council's Brent Scowcroft Center on International Security, a foreign affairs think tank. She told Metro the North Korean threat shouldn't be oversensationalized, but it is a real danger.

What does this latest news mean?
The fact that North Korea has managed to produce even a small nuclear warhead is a major coup for the regime, as making the leap from assembling the material to making the bomb is very difficult.

Is the U.S. at risk?
The U.S. doesn't need to worry about a North Korean nuclear attack on California, as that would be too much of a stretch for North Korean missiles, but it does have to worry about an attack on Japan or South Korea.

How dangerous is the North Korean weaponry?
This is a relatively small bomb — nothing like the bombs that the official nuclear weapons states [U.S., Russia, U.K., France, China] possess, and it's not even on the same level as the arsenals that the non-official nuclear weapons states [India, Pakistan, Israel] have.

What does this mean for the world?
This shows how far the world has come from Barack Obama's 2009 Prague speech, when he made the case for abolition of nuclear weapons. SAM NEWHOUSE

Man pepper-sprays child, tourist who took pic of his subway picnic

Just as you never know what you'll see on the subway, you never know what'll happen if you get caught taking a photo of it.

NIKKI M. MASCALI
@MetroNewYork
nikki.mascali@metro.us

New York is a city where we can literally see anything on the subway, from the most unexpected animals to impromptu concerts and celebrities, and luckily, our phones are always at the ready to capture proof.

Sometimes, though, those secret snaps are not-so-secret and can lead to unpredictable results. Such is the story of Toronto artist Maria Antoniv, who was pepper-sprayed after she took a picture of a man having a picnic, complete with beach chairs and coolers, on an uptown 6 train on Saturday, the New York Daily News reported.

Antoniv was with friend Mariana Stapaj and her 10-year-old daughter Samantha Stapaj, who reside on the Upper East Side, at the Lexington Avenue-53rd Street station when they saw the man having the picnic with a woman and baby and took a photo.

The man, later identified as Dasheen Simpkins, approached Antoniv and pepper-sprayed her in the eyes and Samantha on the forehead.

"It felt like burning," the 10-year-old told the Daily News.

Police arrived on the scene, and Simpkins, who was still on the train, was arrested at the 46th Street-Broadway station in Queens. The 24-year-old, who has 24 prior arrests, was charged with possession of a weapon, attempted assault and endangering the welfare of a child.

Antoniv, who had arrived at Port Authority just an hour prior to the pepper-spray incident, immediately headed home to Toronto afterward.

Mariana Stapaj offered a poignant piece of advice to remember the next time you see something out-there on the train and want to take a picture.

"Don't look at anybody — just go your way," she said.

Trump to visit NYC next week after months away

President Trump announced Tuesday in a tweet that he will be returning to New York in a few days for the first time since the spring. Although he's currently vacationing at his Bedminster, New Jersey, golf course, the president implied he wasn't spending his time brushing up on his putting skills.

"Working hard from New Jersey while White House goes through long planned renovation," he wrote. "Going to New York next week for more meetings."

Trump's New York appearances are typically met with protests, sometimes causing increased security to swarm the front of Trump Tower. While it no longer faces the massive shouting crowds it once did in the wake of the election, The New Yorker recently released an article exploring the lives of a few dedicated activists in the building who still engage in various forms of protest inspired by Occupy Wall Street tactics.

Trump's last visit to the city was in May when he arrived to meet with Australian Prime Minister Malcolm Turnbull at the Intrepid, the historic aircraft carrier in Midtown. AMY RUSSO

Climate report leaked amid fears of suppression

Donald Trump has spent much of his presidency disputing evidence that human activity accelerates climate change, and government scientists worry his administration could try to suppress a study that offers pretty irrefutable evidence.

The 545-page report drafted by 13 government agencies as part of the National Climate Assessment showed average temperatures in the U.S. have risen rapidly since 1980 to the warmest temperatures of the past 1,500 years, and Americans are feeling the effects.

It noted that worldwide, it is "extremely likely" that more than half of the global temperature increase since 1951 can be linked to humans.

"Evidence for a changing climate abounds, from the top of the atmosphere to the depths of the oceans," the report stated. It was leaked to The New York Times amid concerns the Trump administration would bury it.

The National Academy of Sciences has signed off on it, but the 13 federal agencies involved, some of which are headed by climate change deniers, must sign off too before it could be released officially. ERIN TIERNAN

Are the findings of the leaked climate change report surprising?

An expert weighs in on the climate change report leaked to prevent the Trump administration from burying it.

KRISTIN TOUSSAINT
@kristindakota
kristin.toussaint@metro.us

President Trump has rejected evidence concerning climate change and humans' influence on it, but a report leaked to The New York Times concluded that Americans are experiencing climate change and that "many lines of evidence demonstrate that human activities … are primarily responsible."

Andrew Jorgenson is a professor at Boston College and an environmental sociologist studying the human dimensions of environmental changes. He spoke with Metro.

The two main takeaways from this report seem to be that it "directly contradicts" Trump administration claims that "the human contribution to climate change is uncertain," and that Americans are feeling the effects of climate change now. Were these conclusions surprising to you?

Oh no, absolutely not. It's been well established within the broader scientific community for some time, with a great deal of consensus and scientific certainty, that the climate change the world is experiencing now is largely human caused. Primarily, that the burning of fossil fuels — which leads to greenhouse gas emissions results from human activity.

Have your colleagues discussed this report?

For sure, it's just the most recent in an ongoing, never-ending wave of reports like this that come out. … The evidence is so abundant, it's ridiculous that we're still having to have this incredibly important conversation. We should have a long time ago moved beyond this to focus on saying, "Well, the science is quite clear — what are we going to do about it?"

A report concluded that Americans are feeling the effects of climate change right now. PIXABAY

Is it the responsibility of scientists to speak out about climate change?

This is tricky because most scientists are trained to be objective researchers, to let the research speak for itself. The idea being we are not policymakers, but those trained in policy would use our objective, peer-reviewed research to make decisions.

Now, with where things are going in the U.S. with the current presidential administration and what they've done with climate change, you're starting to see more of a growing movement of scientists that work in the public or private sector starting to think that they need to speak out.

Construction on new Delta terminal at LGA takes flight

The terminal is the final phase of LaGuardia's facelift.

NIKKI M. MASCALI
@MetroNewYork
nikki.mascali@metro.us

The LaGuardia Airport of the future is a little closer as construction got underway on the facility's new Delta terminal Tuesday.

The Delta terminal is the final phase of LaGuardia's ongoing redevelopment, which features the addition of more taxiway space, expanded public transit and an AirTrain, state-of-the-art facilities and more parking.

Delta's $3.4 billion investment into the terminal construction on the eastern part of the Queens airport is the largest in the airline's history. The Port Authority of New York and New Jersey, which operates LaGuardia, committed $600 million to the Delta terminal.

"LaGuardia is a pillar of New York's transportation network and a key driver of economic growth, but for too long the airport has been unworthy of New York State," Gov. Andrew Cuomo said at the Delta groundbreaking ceremony. "The groundbreaking at Delta's facilities represents another step forward as we build an entirely new airport at LaGuardia."

Construction on the western portion of the airport and its surrounding roadways began last summer. The first new gates are slated to open sometime next year, with construction expected to be complete by 2021.

Cuomo also announced at the groundbreaking that LaGuardia Gateway Partners (LGP), which is building the western portion of the new airport, has added JLC Infrastructure as an MWBE (Minority and Women Business Enterprises) investor.

> "LaGuardia is a pillar of New York's transportation network ..."
> Gov. Andrew Cuomo

JLC Infrastructure is a joint venture of Magic Johnson Enterprises and Loop Capital Markets LLC, and its investment into LGP marks the first time in state history that an MWBE company is joining a public-private construction project.

LaGuardia Airport opened in 1939 and was designated a historic landmark in 1995.

West Point wine store changing name after Army complains

An owner of a wine and spirits store near the gates of the U.S. Military Academy at West Point on Tuesday said he is changing the store's name after the government accused him of infringing trademarks belonging to the Army.

The name of the Highland Falls, New York, store will change to "Good Nights" from "Black Nights" after a government lawsuit called the original name "confusingly similar" to the Black Knights nickname used since the 1940s by Army athletic teams.

Frank Carpentieri, the owner, said signage will soon reflect the new name, for which he has filed paperwork with a state regulator.

He also said he will stop displaying a flag bearing the West Point crest and other paraphernalia that the government said could be associated with the academy.

"I thought I would be honoring the military" with the Black Nights name, Carpentieri said in a phone interview.

He said he decided to change course after his lawyer warned that he might lose customers, and that "it's going to cost you tons of money to fight."

It was unclear how the changes will affect the lawsuit filed on Tuesday by the office of Acting U.S. Attorney Joon Kim in the Southern District of New York.

That lawsuit said the alleged infringements cause "irreparable injury" to the academy's goodwill and reputation, and violate Army policies.

"The Department of the Army is highly concerned with the use of alcohol among its soldiers and is committed to deglamorizing its use," the complaint said.

A spokeswoman for the military academy had no immediate comment. REUTERS

Trump won't comment on bombing that may have been 'faked'

White House adviser Sebastian Gorka suggested the Minnesota mosque bombing was perpetrated by liberals "faking" a hate crime. YOUTUBE

Top Trump adviser says liberals could have carried out the attack to cause outrage.

ERIN TIERNAN
@ErinTiernan
erin.tiernan@metro.us

President Donald Trump still has not condemned the bombing of a Minnesota mosque that occurred this weekend, and one of Trump's top advisers suggested his silence has to do with concerns the bombing could have been a faked hate crime "propagated by the left."

In an interview on MSNBC on Tuesday, national security adviser Sebastian Gorka defended the president's failure to comment on the Saturday bombing, saying Trump wanted to withhold comment until he learns more about the investigation.

"There's a great rule: All initial reports are false," Gorka said. "You have to check them and find out who the perpetrators are. We've had a series of crimes committed, alleged hate crimes by right-wing individuals in the last six months, that turned out to actually have been propagated by the left."

Gorka offered no examples.

"When you've had people fake hate crimes in the last six months with some regularity, I think it's wise, don't you, to find out what exactly is going on when, in fact, it could turn out to be not who you are expecting," Gorka continued.

Gorka, the ex-national security editor for the conservative Breitbart News, is known for his hardline views on Islam and terrorism.

Also known for his combative approach, Gorka told the MSNBC hosts it wasn't his place to tell the president how to use social media and that Trump would comment as he sees fit.

"When we have some kind of finalized investigation, absolutely [he will comment]," Gorka said.

But Trump has been quick to comment on other recent terrorist attacks without having all the facts, especially those assumed to have been carried out by Muslims. In June, he condemned a terrorist attack in the Philippines that might have just been a robbery, and he spoke out against the London attacks almost instantly via Twitter.

The president has been holed up at his Bedminster, New Jersey, golf resort this week as he began his 17-day vacation from the White House, but it's not as if the commander-in-chief has exactly been off the grid.

Since the bombing, he's found time to tweet (or retweet) 33 times, talking about "the failing New York Times," White House leakers, jobs and North Korea.

Minnesota's Gov. Mark Dayton declared the bombing "an act of terrorism" after an improvised explosive device went off at the Dar Al-Farooq Islamic Center in Bloomington, a city just outside Minneapolis.

"When you've had people fake hate crimes in the last six months with some regularity, I think it's wise, don't you, to find out what exactly is going on when, in fact, it could turn out to be not who you are expecting." Gorka

KKK, Nazis, white supremacists plan 'largest hate-gathering in decades'

A planned demonstration by white supremacy groups in Virginia is being described as the "largest hate-gathering of its kind in decades in the United States" by a monitoring group.

White nationalist extremists plan to protest on Saturday the removal of a Confederate-era Gen. Robert E. Lee statue in Charlottesville, Virginia, in a move expected to draw thousands, according to reports. White supremacy groups, like the Ku Klux Klan, have been "emboldened by the Trump presidency," according to nonprofit civil rights group the Southern Poverty Law Center (SPLC).

The "summer of hate" gathering is expected to lure alt-right groups, neo-Confederates, KKK members and neo-Nazis from behind their computers, creating a unity the groups can only achieve by personal, nonanonymous connections.

The Robert E. Lee Sculpture in Charlottesville, Virginia. WIKIMEDIA COMMONS

"This is the biggest rally event we've had this millennium," event organizer Brad Griffin said on a recent radio show hosted by former KKK leader David Duke.

But the Unite the Right rally will give "the movement a real-world presence, which it hasn't had in 15 years," Griffin added.

Law enforcement anticipates counterprotests and the city said the protest permit will only be approved if the event is moved to McIntire Park, where the crowd size could be more easily managed, the Richmond-Times Dispatch reported.

Rally organizer Jason Kessler said the rally must take place in Emancipation Park, recently renamed from Lee Park, where the statue of Confederate Gen. Robert E. Lee stands.

Kessler said he is ready to pursue legal action rather than acquiesce.

"There is no doubt that Mr. Kessler has a First Amendment right to hold a demonstration and to express his views. Nor is there any doubt that we, as a city, have an obligation to protect those rights, the people who seek to exercise them and the broader community in which they do," City Manager Maurice Jones told the Dispatch. "We have determined that we cannot do all of these things effectively if the demonstration is held in Emancipation Park."

Trump, aides take vacations amid summer of discontent

President Trump's White House staff has decamped from D.C. GETTY IMAGES

For President Trump, the start of his 17-day "working vacation" at his New Jersey golf course means more of the same: He's hard at work on tweetstorms, lambasting "phony Fake News" and the "failing NYTimes" for reporting that Mike Pence is gearing up for a presidential run of his own, and claiming that his base is "far bigger & stronger than ever before!"

Some top White House staffers are taking the opportunity to get as far away from Dodge as possible — while others in Trump's orbit just can't seem to break away, as Vanity Fair reported.

Kellyanne Conway has been hanging out on the beach in New Jersey, where she and her attorney husband have a beach house. Former press secretary Sean Spicer was seen cheering on the Boston Red Sox, while vanished communications director Anthony Scaramucci was taking refuge on Long Island, walking into an Italian restaurant "to cheers and requests from women for photos."

But the first daughter and son-in-law aren't so lucky, having accompanied the president to Bedminster on Air Force One. Ivanka Instagrammed a picture of a "girls' night" and weighed in via Twitter on a "vastly improved labor market."

The Trump administration may look back on summer with more wistful eyes than usual, as various scales of hellfire await them in Washington this September. First and most literal, there is the North Korean nuclear threat to address, which has escalated sharply over the last week. Robert Mueller's investigation continues to advance amid reports that a grand jury has been impanelled and investigators are looking into Trump's financial dealings. The Republicans' tax reform initiative looks likely to stall after the failed Obamacare repeal, and negotiations on lifting the debt ceiling look like no piece of cake.

Why Aren't Doctors Telling About These Two Often

Two Advanced Medical Treatments Every Knee Arthritis Sufferer

New York City, New York

NY Pain MD* is a medical group with locations in Midtown NYC and Downtown NYC that has treated thousands of knee arthritis and joint pain patients.

Here is what every knee arthritis sufferer should know about the best treatments and options available today. Including when and why you should consider each of these 2 treatment approaches to get maximum results.

If you suffer with knee or other join arthritis pain, you have probably already tried many treatments ... especially countless pain medications. Experienced doctors understand that, even though pain medications such as anti-inflammatory pain pills are part of the recommended early treatment plan for knee arthritis pain... they are rarely the answer over the longer term.

In most cases they have minimal results (if any) and have a laundry list of potential side effects. Some being serious and even life threatening.

Are There Any Better Options?

Thankfully, advancements in science and technology come extremely fast. And now there are two very good options for knee arthritis to help relieve the pain.

There are two options that many knee arthritis sufferers have never heard of.

Before we get into the two treatments, please understand this...

NY Pain MD is a well established medical clinic that has treated thousands of knee arthritis sufferers and joint and back pain sufferers. Patients travel from all over the area and even several states away from NYC to be treated at one of their clinics because they want the best medical treatments available. What you are about to discover are two REAL medical treatments. Not miracle cures you see on infomercials or non -medicial treatments promoted on the internet.

Know this fact: There is no cure for arthritis. But there are these two treatments that have already helped thousands of knee arthritis sufferers - possibly just like you.

The first treatment is more common than the second. Even if you have heard of this treatment - or even tried it without good results - please read this. You will find out why it may not have worked for you and how you may be able to get much better results.

#1 Viscosupplementation

Viscosupplementation has gained quite a bit of popularity in recent years and it has gotten mixed results for a couple of reasons.

But before we get into that,here's what you need to know about viscosupplementation.

When you have arthritis, you suffer a decrease in the lubrication fluids in your knee.

In other words, your knee joints basically "dries up."

The lubricating fluid that decreases is called "synovial fluid." Pharmaceutical companies (with the help of scientists) can now make natural synovial fluid gel-like compounds that, during viscosupplementation, treatments... doctors can precisely introduce directly into the knee and other joints.

This helps replace the lubricating fluid to the knee joint - allowing it to move more freely and smoothly and often decreasing or even eliminating the pain.

What Results Can Be Expected?

Like all medical treatments, the results vary and can not be predicted. But many knee arthritis sufferers get dramatic results. It is not uncommon for patients to either postpone knee replacement surgery for years... or even permanently cancel it.

But There Is A BIG Problem

The key is the treatment must be EXTREMELY PRECISE. If the injection is slightly off, the medication will not get into the knee joint and the treatment will not work.

That's why the experts at NY Pain MD use Precision Arthritis Targeting Technology or P.A.T.T. so they can actually see the medicine going directly into the knee joint during the treatment.

Research shows that doctors performing joint injections without imaging technology can miss the joint as much as 30% of the time.

If you have tried viscosupplementation without this imaging technology and without good results - this may very well be why.

That's why NY Pain MD takes it even one step further. They do not just use one-step process of advanced imaging during treatment - they use two in their "double confirmation" process. This is to ensure patients get the best possible results.

Another Important Factor

Viscosupplementation medications also come in several different "brands" or formulas. Like all medications, some people respond better to one than another. So, the experts at NY Pain MD use several and great effort is taken to figure out what is the best one for YOU.

One last thing: The experts at NY Pain MD have found that earlier you start Viscosupplementation the better.

This is most likely because the longer you wait - the more joint destuction takes place.

That's why NY Pain MD is now seeing so many patients as young as 35 to 40.

Summary: If you have arthritis pain and have not tried Viscosupplementation you should look into it as soon as possible.

If you have tried it without good results. you may still be able to get great results with the proper targeted imaging and specific medication.

What Should You Do If Viscosupplementation Fails?

When conservative treatment, including viscosupplementation fails ... most knee arthritis sufferers believe their only option is total knee replacement surgery.

This is not true...and here is why

There is another treatment for serious knee arthritis pain most people (and even doctors) do not know about.

#2: Radiofrequency Treatment

This treatment is technically called, "Radiofrequency Neurotomy." Or RF for short.

RF is a procedure that is based the theory that blocking the nerve supply to the painful area may alleviate pain and restore function.

ADVERTISEMENT

Knee Arthritis Suffers Successful Treatments?

Needs To Know - Before Or After Knee Replacement Surgery

Several branches of nerves that surround the knee are know as "genicular nerves."

Radiofrequency waves are delivered to the genicular nerves under advanced imaging to "block" the nerve from transmitting pain signals.

There are two distinct parts to this treatment. First, a test, diagnostic "G Block" proce-dure is done to determine if the procedure is going to decrease pain and improve function.

If this first "test" procedure is successful, then one two week later, Radio Frequen-cy waves are applied for long term relief.

Is It Safe?

Research has shown this to provide relief for patients and the to procedure to be safe and effective.

One study published Novem-ber 4, 2010 in the journal Pain found that RF treated subjects on average "achieved at least 50% knee pain relief at 1,4 and 12 weeks, respective-ly. No patient reported a post procedure adverse event during the follow-up period. Some studies indicate some patients may get years of relief in some cases. " RF neu rotomy (radio frequency treatment) of genicular nerves leads to sig ificant pain reduction and functional improvement in a subset of elderly chronic knee osteoarthritis pain, and thus may be an effective treatment in such cases."

It should also be mentioned that, like all procedures, results will vary patient to patient.

Who Should Try This Treatment?

RF should be considered after other treatments, such as anti-inflammatory pain medication and viscosupple-mentation do not offer good enough results.

RF can be utilized before resorting to total knee replacement. RF allows many patients to avoid knee replacement surgery.

RF has also been found effective AFTER knee replacement surgery when the patient still feels pain.

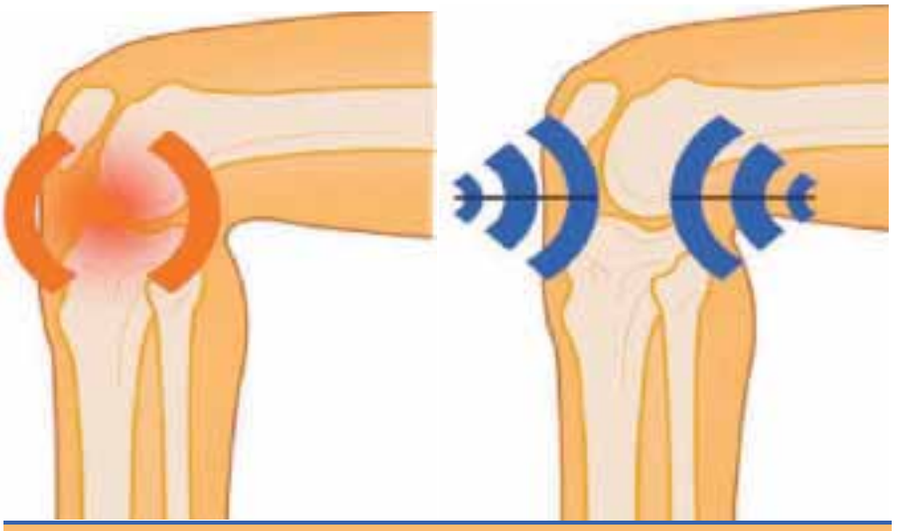
The pain after a failed knee replacement surgery can be de-bilitating and this procedure can be the only thing that helps and provided relief.

What To Do Next If You Are In Pain

Here is the "X" factor many do not consider that might be the difference between you getting the best possible treat-ment or not.

Many experts suggest choos-ing a medical clinic that offers all these treatments and has the proper, most ad-vanced technology all under one roof.

Advanced Treatment Uses Medical Radio Frequency Waves To Relieve Pain



Science rescues knee arthritis sufferers?: Radio Frequency Waves are used to block the nerve supply to the painful area and may alleviate pain and restore function to many. Many patients still in pain after a knee replacement may respond very well to these treatments allowing the possibility of avoiding additional surgery.

This way, the doctors work-ing on your case can give you a proper examination and advise the best possible treatment plan for your indi-vidual case.

Several experts work as a team to offer you the best treatment options at the appropriate time to maxi-mize results. It is also very convenient to have all your doctors and treatments in one place. Traveling to dif-ferent offices can be time consuming and even more expensive.

NY Pain MD believes this "X" factor is one of the reasons so many knee arthritis sufferes travel from all over to be treated at their advanced medicial clinics.

NY Pain MD offers a limited number of complimentary knee arthritis treatment screen-ings every month. These screenings are a way for knee arthritis sufferers to get some of their ques-tions answered and see if they are a candidate for one of the cutting-edge treatments offered at NY Pain MD

If you would like a compli-mentary screening, just call 855-456-PAIN [7246] and tell the scheduling coordi-nator "I would like a complimentary knee arthritis screening." The screenings fill up fast every month. If you do not call in time to get one this month, the schedul-ing coordiantators will get you appointed for next month

This screening is no cost and no obligation. Many of the treatments offered are covered by many insurance plans and Medicare

"The Bachelorette" picked wrong. So, so wrong

Bryan Abasolo won Rachel Lindsay's heart on the finale of "The Bachelorette." We do not approve because, real talk? Bryan is the worst.

Rachel is charming, incredibly intelligent, and straight-up stunning. And it looked like she could do no wrong. But then, she picked Bryan — the skeevy one with the overbearing mother — over beautiful gap-toothed, salt-and-pepper fox Peter, and beautiful, charming, gorgeous Eric. Girl, what?

Here's why the bilingual chiropractor from Miami was the wrong choice — from the moment Rachel gave him the first-impression rose.

He says "mwah" every time he kisses her on the cheek.

Why is onomatopoeia necessary? It makes the whole interaction seem childish and insincere.

In the first episode, he went so far as to give her "brownie points" for understanding some of his Spanish.

This is just a matter of rules-of-war: It is you who should be vying for her brownie points, sir. She doesn't need your approval, she's already perfect. Also? She's the dang Bachelorette!

The time he asked, "Have you ever dated a Colombian?"

It's kind of distasteful to ask about the ethnicities of someone's previous partners. And to make it worse, when she responds that she hasn't, he tells her multiple times: "Oh, girl, you in trouble." What does that even mean?

He consumes her whole face whenever he kisses her.

Like a dementor sucking the soul out of a beautiful and innocent Muggle. It's pretty rude.

"If she doesn't accept, I think it'll be the biggest mistake of her life."

These are literal words he says in the finale. Literally.

Two words: his mother.

Who jokes about killing Rachel? Seriously.

ADDITIONAL REPORTING BY MICHELLE BYRON.

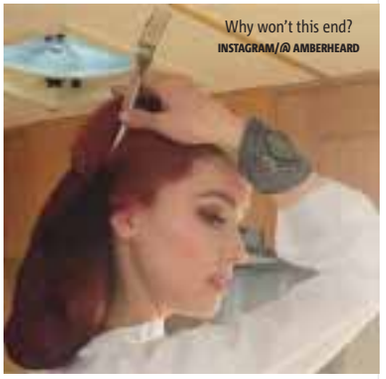
Elon & Amber still "love" each other

If you were worried that there were any hard feelings between Amber Heard and Elon Musk, don't be! On Tuesday, Musk, 46, went out of his way to prove that his split with Heard is like, so amicable.

Heard, 31, ever the thirst-bot, posted a picture of herself sticking a fork into her red wig, recognizing that she looks like a beautiful, albeit low-budget Ariel from "The Little Mermaid." And Musk immediately took to the comments, writing "Very cute." Succint!

Then, he elaborated. "Btw, just to clear up some of the press storm this weekend, although Amber and I did break up, we are still friends, remain close and love one another," he wrote.



Why won't this end?
INSTAGRAM/@AMBERHEARD

"Long-distance relationships when both partners have intense work obligations are always difficult, but who knows what the future holds." Sure!

So, uh, hopefully this is it and neither of these two will continue milking their former relationship beyond it's worth. Hopefully.

Don't blame Jennifer Lawrence

Why, though?
ALL PHOTOS GETTY IMAGES UNLESS OTHERWISE STATED

After Chris Pratt and Anna Faris officially announced their separation on social media, fans on Twitter, apropos of nothing, decided it's J. Law's fault. She's hot and she recently costarred with Pratt in "Passengers," so she must be the home-wrecker!

Sure, the male human embodiment of a golden retriever and America's favorite effortless cool girl may have indulged in a semi-abusive relationship while trapped on a spaceship. Sure, they're both blond, seem down-to-earth, and likely fun to drink beers with. But none of that indicates they ever smashed.

This isn't the first time the rumor mill has linked the two. Back in 2015, Star magazine alleged that Faris was worried about her husband and Lawrence cheating on the set of the problematic outerspace romance.

In reality, Lawrence has been busy dating director Darren Aronofsky since last fall. She stars in his latest, a thriller called "Mother!," out in September. Javier Bardem plays her husband, so, uh, you better watch out, Penelope. KATE MOONEY

Julie Kessler (Julie Klausner) and Billy Epstein (Billy Eichner) get these looks a lot in "Difficult People." KC BAILEY, HULU

Meet the real New Yorkers

Hulu's "Difficult People" gets real about what it takes to live in New York. EVA KIS

New York had a very flattering run in movies and TV. For a few decades now, people believed our streets were clean instead of a hazardous obstacle course, our social lives looked like "Friends" rather than watching it from our sofa, and that an apartment anywhere in Manhattan was affordable on your own.

Myths aside, don't misunderstand — Lin-Manuel Miranda wasn't wrong when he dubbed it the "greatest city in the world." But he left out how difficult it can be on the people who live in it.

That's where "Difficult People" comes in. Hulu's original series returned for its third season on Tuesday, bringing back the two most realistic New Yorkers in entertainment with Julie Kessler (creator/writer Julie Klausner) and Billy Epstein (Billy Eichner).

As the title implies, these are not nice people. It would be easy to dismiss their jaded attitude as just typical comedians, but here's a secret about them that's also true for New Yorkers: They're bitter because they're idealists. New York City forces you to cultivate selfishness as a survival mechanism.

The selfishness of Julie and Billy is distinct from other modern series set in the city. The closest analogue in terms of New York life is "Broad City," but theirs is a selfishness rooted in obliviousness. And while "Girls" was rightly praised for its realism about the personal and professional struggles of young women, they were by turns so narcissistically selfish that it's a wonder they didn't shift planetary orbits.

But Julie and Billy are selfish out of self-defense, and that's getting much closer to the core of New Yorkers; it's how they survive.

Professionally, you're defending your aspirations against a city full of the most talented, beautiful, intelligent people. Personally, you're defending your time and energy by having a small social circle of people you actually care about.

Selfishness becomes your shield, humor your sword to keep fighting for your place in the city. Because magic does happen — why else would you stay? You get the part you auditioned for; you find someone as weird as you. But to be ready for it, you need to be selfish.

Where will 'Game of Thrones' go from here?

Two of Metro's finest collect their thoughts after this season's first four explosive episodes.

RACHAEL VAUGHAN CLEMMONS , EVA KIS

Jon and Dany's union seems inevitable at this point.
ALL PHOTOS HBO

Not only has "Game of Thrones" been a thrilling ride this year, but the quickened pace sees our heroes — and our villains — getting s—t done. Westeros might be a mess, but at least it's an action-packed mess that leaves a little room for romance.

We're officially over halfway through the episodes for season seven. What's happened, and what's in store for the future? Here, Metro's two biggest "Thrones" fanatics — Rachael Vaughan Clemmons and Eva Kis — talk about whether Jon and Daenerys are the endgame, speculate on the future of the Lannister name and say a long farewell to Dorne.

What's going on between Jon and Dany?

Eva Kis: Dany left Daario behind because she's looking to marry into power in Westeros. That power is Jon, so like, that's not even a question.

Rachael Vaughan Clemmons: That's true, she did say as much at the end of the last season.

EK: But she could be doing a better job of seducing him, if that's the goal. Because Jon is neither the most perceptive nor passionate of men.

RVC: Yes! In a lot of ways, he's very much Daario Lite, which I would like to trademark. The chemistry is definitely not the same, but the only way I can see the series going forward is an inevitable union between the two of them.

EK: Also worth noting that he has looked into the eyes of the real enemy and feels a duty to protect the North from it. He can see the advantage of an alliance, too, but someone needs to say the words "MARRY THAT GIRL" to him. Ahem, Ser Davos.

RVC: Yeah, stop staring at Missandei and get to work, my dude. It's kind of weird to me that the word "marriage" hasn't come up yet. Do you think it will by the end of the season, at least?

RIP, Queen of Thorns.

EK: I think it has to. The cave thing was supposed to be way more romantic than it was, if you listen to David Benioff tell it. It's pretty clear that's the endgame, but they're not going to get there without both sides realizing what has to happen and finding a way to marry for convenience, if nothing else?

What happens to the people of Dorne and Highgarden?

RVC: I like how "Thrones" was basically like, "Oh we're actually going to act as if Dorne never happened and kill everyone off." But it begs the question: What happens to the people of Dorne and Highgarden now that the Martells and Tyrells are all gone? Westeros is a mess.

EK: They are wrapping up a lot of storylines that just never really went anywhere or simply ended. The Tyrells were all dead except for the matriarch. And Dorne was only there to be sexy and bolster Daenerys' ranks for a little while. It sucks but this show needed to narrow its scope since we're getting closer to the end.

RVC: True, but the people of Dorne were severely underused. Except for Oberyn. He truly was magnificent. RIP, my dude.

EK: Dorne, we hardly knew ye.

Let's talk about the Lannisters.

RVC: The Lannisters — like many of the other great families of Westeros — are basically down to their last few. The Lannister name is definitely not going to survive this war, and Cersei knows it. She also doesn't care — remember when Jamie mentions that the so-called dynasty she's trying to build won't be passed on to anybody since all their kids are dead? And Cersei is like, "Oh then, a dynasty for us!"

Jaime Lannister is between a rock and, well, the bottom of the river.

It's also worth mentioning that Jaime is finally kind of seeing outside of himself and realizing Cersei is mad AF. What conclusions will he come to once he finds his way out of that river, or whatever? He's definitely going to make it out, right?

EK: BuzzFeed had this interesting piece that basically comes down to: Jaime will need to rid himself of his armor and his legacy to survive.

RVC: Yeah, he'll have to literally strip himself of his armor, and mentally strip himself of his name and legacy in order to get out of there. Most likely just to be Dany's prisoner. Perhaps a Jaime and Tyrion reunion is on the horizon.

I'm also hoping that someone will be able to explain to me why Cersei is choosing to keep that disaster haircut. But, we'll see.

Enjoy car-free bike paths on Governors Island. TIMOTHY SHENCK

Cruise the Hudson River without the tourists
It doesn't get much cheaper to get on the water than the new NYC Ferry service, but are you really going to feel romantic on a commuter boat? That's what we thought. Leave the commuting and sightseeing behind and get on the water with a 45-minute cruise on the North River Lobster Co. boat. Alas, the 3-story floating lobster shack is no longer free to sail ($10 per person), but it's still a bargain compared with other Hudson cruises, plus you've got a full bar of $7 to $14 to enjoy on their open-air rooftop. Try the Nautical Margarita with tequila, triple sec in your choice of Nautical Blue, Melon or Classic flavors. Pier 81 at West 41st St.

'High' on sweets and culture
Have you really done summer in the city without a stroll of the High Line? Enjoy frozen treats from the People's Pops ($3.50 each, at W. 15th St.) in funky flavors like spiced pear and apple rosewater. This is another good-times-all-the-time destination, whether you want to relax in the sun or get your culture on with regular musical performances and outdoor art exhibits, like Sheila Hicks' art exhibit "Hop, Skip, Jump, and Fly: Escape From Gravity" through March 2018 at the Western Rail Yards.

Get active in Hudson River Park
With more than 4 miles of green space and waterfront fun, there's more to do than there's summer for at Hudson River Park. Cash-strapped daters who enjoy the outdoors can enjoy a round of mini golf on New York City's only 18-hole course for just $6 per person or join a game of beach volleyball (Pier 25), among free skate parks, kayaking and more. hudsonriverpark.org

Bike on Governors Island
Strap on a helmet and take to two wheels for a casual outdoor date on Governors Island, where you'll never run out of things to do. Rent a Citibike ($12 for the day) at Soissons Landing in Manhattan or Yankee Pier in Brooklyn, then hop on the ferry to Governors Island for $2 (round-trip) for a car-free afternoon. Hop on and off between the islands dozens of free things to do, from art exhibits to mini golf and hammocks, or come for a special weekend like a step back into the funky '70s during the NYC Volkswagen Traffic Jam, featuring vintage VWs, on Aug. 20. govisland.com

Chow down at Oyster Happy Hour
Get to know your date while getting a break on a summer essential: oysters. Happy hours are scattered all over the city, but we love the ambiance at Atrium in DUMBO, which has $1 oysters at the bar Mon-Fri from 5:30-7 p.m. Cull & Pistol in Chelsea Market offers $1 oysters Mon-Fri from 4-6 p.m. And swing by the world's best bar The Dead Rabbit for $1 Blue Point oysters Mon-Fri from 5-7 p.m.

Be kids again in DUMBO
Feeling nostalgic for your childhood? There's no better place to indulge in simple pleasures than Brooklyn Bridge Park. A mere $2 ticket will get you a ride on DUMBO's 1920s-era merry-go-round, Jane's Carousel. Stroll along the winding paths and waterfront for incredible photo ops of Manhattan, if you brought bathings suits the free Pop-Up Pool is still open, then grab some locally made treats at the Brooklyn Ice Cream Factory.

7 Ways to clean with white vinegar

White vinegar is nontoxic, antibacterial and the cheapest household cleaner you might ever encounter.

KIMBERLY M. AQUILINA
@KimESTAqui
kimberly.aquilina@metro.us

home

Sponge your window with a mix of white vinegar and water, then squeege it clean. ALL PHOTOS ISTOCK UNLESS OTHWERISE STATED

The cure for Spot's spot on the carpet: Blot, blot, blot, then soak it up with white vinegar and water.

There is a liquid in your home just sitting there, so unassuming in its bottle, but secretly magical. Not wine (that magic isn't a secret, anyway), but white vinegar. If you've never tried cleaning with white vinegar, here are a few ways to start.

1 Microwave

Mix 1/4 cup vinegar and one cup of water and boil in the microwave. When things get steamy, open the door and wipe away the gunk. The heat and moisture will have loosened the grime so you don't have to chisel it away.

2 Window cleaner

Mix equal parts distilled white vinegar and water. You can mix in a bucket, apply with a sponge and squeegee off (be sure to wet the squeegee first) or mix in a spray bottle and wipe off using paper towels, microfiber clothes, or newspaper.

To avoid streaks, don't do when the window is in direct sunlight. Still seeing streaks? You might have buildup from your previous cleaning products. Go with warmed-up full-strength vinegar.

3 Mopping the floors

If you have no-wax floors, this is an easy trick for rinse-free cleaning. Mix 1/2 cup of white distilled vinegar to a half-gallon of warm water. Use a mop or do it the old-fashioned way: with a rag or sponge.

Change the water when it gets dirty.

4 Bathtub cleaner

This is a two-parter: First, wipe the tub with white distilled vinegar; second, follow up with baking soda, and rinse. You can even clean shower doors with vinegar. Soak a sponge in white vinegar and wipe. You don't even need to rinse!

5 Unclog the showerhead

Add a cup of vinegar to a plastic storage bag and soak the showerhead in the vinegar overnight. In the morning, remove the bag and turn on the shower.

6 Pet-stain removal

Once your puppy piddles on the carpet, he's going to smell that spot and think it's his personal toilet. Getting out the odor is more important than getting out the stain, unless you're cool with your living room being used as a lawn.

First step: Blot, blot and blot. Using paper towels, blot up as much of the urine as you can. Walk on the paper towels to really soak it up.

Next, make sure your carpet is colorfast. If you don't know, dab some vinegar on a spot that isn't very visible. If the color stays, you're good to move on to the next step.

Mix equal parts white vinegar and water, wet the spot thoroughly and let it marinate for about 10 minutes. Repeat step one.

If you feel fancy, sprinkle baking soda on the area when the carpet is dry and vacuum. This will zap any lingering smells from Spot's accident.

7 Clean your automatic coffee maker

Water can leave minerals and coffee can leave behind oils, both of which can mess with your morning enjoyment. Always follow manufacturer's instructions, so if vinegar is on the list of things not to use with your machine, don't do the following. For anyone else, this is an easy way to clear out the grime for the truest-tasting joe you've had in a while:

Empty the coffee pot and fill with vinegar. Pour it in the water reservoir and run a cycle. Dump the carafe again and fill with water. Run another brewing cycle. Err on the side of rinsing too much to ensure the vinegar taste will be gone before you brew your next pot.

White vinegar is a great multi-tasking household cleaner. CREATIVE COMMONS

At $350 million, the late Univision chair's Bel Air mansion is America's priciest listing

The Chartwell Estate in Bel Air, California comprises more than 10 acres and dates back to 1933. PROVIDED

THE REAL DEAL

The home of late Univision chairman Jerrold Perenchio is set to hit the market for $350 million.

The Sumner Spaulding-designed estate, which is known as "Chartwell," comprises more than 10 acres in Bel Air and dates back to 1933.

Coldwell Banker Global Luxury, Hilton & Hyland and Berkshire Hathaway Home Services are marketing the property on behalf of Perenchio's estate, according to a release from the brokerages.

The Hollywood mogul, who reportedly represented the likes of Marlon Brando and Elizabeth Taylor, died of lung cancer in May. He bought the initial site in 1986 and then expanded the site over 30 years by acquiring additional adjacent properties.

The main house totals 25,000 square feet, with a detailed limestone facade, a ballroom, a wine cellar and a period- paneled dining room, according to a statement from the brokerages. The grounds include manicured gardens, a tennis court, covered parking for 40 cars and a 75-foot pool.

The home was featured as Jed and Granny Clampett's house on "The Beverly Hillbillies" and Ronald and Nancy Reagan used to live next door.

Hilton & Hyland co-founder Jeff Hyland did not immediately respond to a request for comment.

The property appears to be the most expensive residential home currently on the market in the U.S., though a spec mansion being developed by L.A. developer Nile Niami is rumored to be quietly asking $500 million.

Anderson poised to be Jets No. 1 WR

After Quincy Enunwa's season-ending injury, the Jets are looking at an unproven set of hands to lead the receivers.

JOE PANTORNO
@JoePantorno
joseph.pantorno@metro.us

The New York Jets could be relying on unproven wide receiver Robby Anderson to pace the pass-catching unit in 2017 without Quincy Enunwa. GETTY IMAGES

The preseason hasn't even started yet and still, the New York Jets' 2017 campaign is taking huge hits.

On Monday, the team lost top wide receiver Quincy Enunwa for the season because of a bulging disc in his neck. For an offense devoid of many talents, his loss further confirms that this year is going to be a horrendous one.

Gang Green's quarterback situation is one of the worst in the league as veteran Josh McCown battles for the starting spot against unproven youngsters Christian Hackenberg and Bryce Petty.

If the question of who will be throwing the ball wasn't enough of a doozy, the Jets also have to contend with the fact that their quarterbacks don't have much to throw to.

Enter Robby Anderson, a second-year wide receiver out of Temple who had a surprisingly productive rookie season in 2016 thanks to Eric Decker's injury issues.

Appearing in all 16 games, Anderson finished third on the team with 587 receiving yards on 42 receptions.

At 6-foot-3 and a thin 190 pounds, he is a solid blend of height and speed, which makes him a vertical threat downfield. Not only does he hold the ability to outrun his defender, but he can outjump them, too.

In true Jets fashion though, there is always a catch. Anderson was an afterthought in New York's offense last season when the team still had Brandon Marshall and Enunwa to throw to. It remains to be seen how he will fare against the opposition's best cornerback.

He also has some off-field issues. Anderson must go to Miami on Sept. 11 for the start of his trial in which he is accused of resisting an officer with violence after he pushed a cop at a music festival in May. The Jets' regular season starts the day before in Buffalo against the Bills.

For the Jets' sake, Anderson best not miss time because the wide receiving situation behind him is less than perfect:

Harvey–Mets split likely?

New York Mets starting pitcher Matt Harvey isn't in unfamiliar territory at the moment. The 28-year-old right-hander who once was the future of the team's pitching staff is recovering from a shoulder injury that has held him out since mid-June.

If all goes well, he could return to the mound by the end of August in which he could basically be going through a tryout.

Not for his place within the Mets rotation that is stacked when healthy, but for another team.

Now that is unfamiliar territory.

Newsday's Marc Carig reported that teams around the league called the Mets to inquire about the injured Harvey, who is 4-3 with a 5.25 ERA in 13 starts this season.

While the Mets weren't interested, it's understandable why teams were calling. Harvey suffered his third major injury in the last four seasons, hampering his progress toward All-Star-caliber ace. When he is healthy, his actions off the field have gotten him into some trouble, including a three-game suspension this year for partying a little too hard on Cinco de Mayo.

The Mets could have been looking to sell him off before he hits free agency after the 2018 season, which could have offered potential suitors an opportunity to acquire him at a much lower price than expected.

But New York looks to have a different idea.

Carig added that the Mets are probably going to keep Harvey through the winter "in hopes" that he puts together a strong first half in 2018.

Matt Harvey's time with the Mets might be running out. GETTY IMAGES

With his value higher, general manager Sandy Alderson could try and deal him at the trade deadline for a better return.

It's a dangerous game to play, though. Should Harvey suffer another injury or struggle on the mound, the pickings around the trade market could be slim, risking the chance that the Mets get nothing for him and that he walks in free agency.

JOE PANTORNO

Brandon Marshall could create a dynamic duo alongside Odell Beckham Jr. for Big Blue's offense in 2017. GETTY IMAGES

Marshall brings big body to Giants' O

The Giants' new addition could provide a big-time outside threat to Eli Manning's offense.

KRISTIAN DYER
@KristianRDyer
sports@metro.us

Brandon Marshall was brought in by the New York Giants to be a difference maker.

It isn't too much of an ask considering the veteran wide receiver has had plenty of big moments during his career.

The former New York Jets wide receiver is already making an impression in his first training camp with his new team.

Just two years removed from a standout 1,000-yard season with the Jets in 2015, Marshall's addition to the Giants via free agency adds yet another dimension to a potentially potent offense. He's a possession receiver with a big body that brings a vertical threat down the field.

With a receiving corps that already includes Odell Beckham Jr., second-year standout Sterling Shepard and first-round pick Evan Engram at tight end, the Giants have some lethal targets to stretch the field and in the red zone.

Along with the aforementioned Beckham, it is Marshall who will be expected to take this offense to the next level.

"He's a big man. When there's a lot of noise around him, he doesn't seem to flinch. We're not in a live environment at this point in time, but he's a guy that's made a living," Giants head coach Ben McAdoo said. "It seems the more traffic around him, the better he gets."

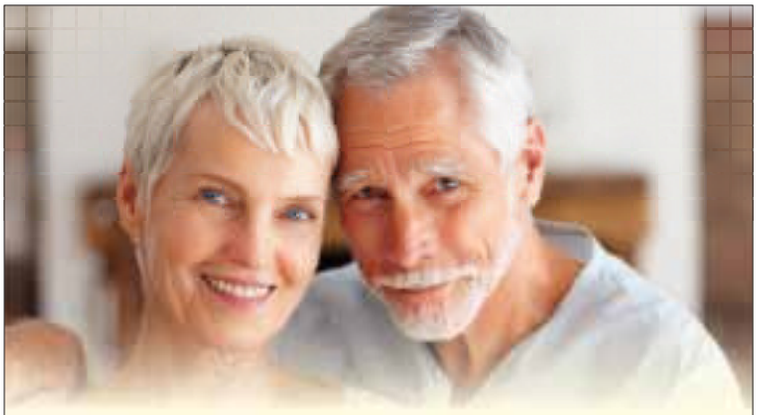
McAdoo won't make any bold statements about Marshall's impact on the offense to date, that just isn't in his nature. But he sees certain things in the player that have him feeling good about his proposed impact on the team.

He'll be counted on to help them score some points this year, something they struggled with last year.

Last year the Giants were very average, ranked No. 16 in the NFL in quarterback rating in the red zone. A major part of the reason was the lack of targets and big bodies for quarterback Eli Manning to hit.

And while it is just training camp, McAdoo has a good idea what Marshall can bring to his offense.

"Yeah. Again, we're just out here practicing right now. He's not live, he hasn't been tackled yet in practice," McAdoo said. "The film shows, the evidence shows year after year that the more traffic he's in, it seems like the better he plays."



This medical research study includes an in-house stay of 3 days/ 2 nights and 6 outpatient visits, 1 phone call and 1 follow up visit.

You may be compensated for your travel and related expenses up to $2,350 for your participation in the study.

Aries Be wary of anyone asking too many personal questions. Protect your passwords, credit cards and any information that could be used against you.

Taurus Your enthusiasm and contributions will be appreciated and rewarded. What you discover about others will give you greater insight into your capabilities.

Gemini Emotions will get you into trouble. Be careful what you reveal to colleagues or anyone who may not have your best interests at heart. Protect personal information.

Cancer Express your emotions and discuss matters that are of concern to you. Your ideas will be well-received and will set the stage for positive change. Romance is featured.

Leo A change of scenery will do you good. Set up a business meeting or attend a function offering information that will help you improve the way you do things.

Virgo An emotional situation will help you express your true feelings and prompt you to make improvements to important relationships. Communication will be key.

Libra Make personal changes that will boost your confidence. Updating your look or working on projects that add to your skills, and experience will help you get ahead.

Scorpio Stick close to home and explore innovative ideas that can help you make progress. A business meeting with someone interested in your talents looks promising.

Sagittarius A passionate approach to your endeavors will make you difficult to beat. Do whatever it takes to improve your relationship with a child, parent or sibling.

Capricorn Partnerships, negotiations and joint ventures are featured. Discuss your plans with someone who has as much to contribute as you do. Romance is highlighted.

Aquarius Children, parents or organizations that require your help should be handled with patience. Use innovative tactics to get people to pitch in and help.

Pisces Your sincerity will capture attention and help you get your way. Let your creative ideas lead to personal change and the acquisition of new skills. EUGENIA LAST
